Private Money Pitch Deck Template

The full seven-page deck from Chapter 9, every page written out with the numbers templated. Swap in your own deal's figures and you're ready to sit down with a lender.

The legal line first, and it isn't optional. Promissory notes and profit-sharing arrangements can be securities under federal and state law, especially when you raise from more than one person, from passive investors, or through public posts and meetups. Offering securities without registration or an exemption is illegal even when everyone is paid back in full. Before you show this deck to anyone, have a securities attorney review your structure and how you plan to find lenders.

Page 1: Executive Summary

One page, in plain numbers:

> "I'm buying a $250,000 short-term rental in [market] with the following terms: $25,000 down, $225,000 first-mortgage financing, projected $55,000 in annual revenue on conservative comps. I'm seeking $20,000 in private financing to cover furnishing and setup: 18 months at 10% annual interest, secured by a second deed of trust on the property. That returns you $3,000 in interest income, paid monthly or quarterly, with full repayment by month 18 from the property's cash flow or a refinance."

A second deed of trust, in plain English, is a recorded claim on the house, behind the bank's, so if everything fails your lender is in line to be paid from the sale.

Pages 2–3: Market Analysis

Prove the demand:

- Market-tool comps: what similar properties rent for
- Historical occupancy
- The ADR trend, rising, falling, or stable
- How revenue distributes across the months

Use actual screenshots from your data tools. Show them the data is real, not your gut feeling.

Page 4: Deal Summary

- Purchase price: $250,000
- Down payment: $25,000 (10%)
- First mortgage: $225,000
- Their capital request: $20,000 private loan
- Total capital deployed: $45,000

- Property control: 100% ownership; lender holds a second lien
- Timeline: 45 days to close, 30 days of light renovation if needed, guests within 90 days
- Expected revenue: $55,000/year, conservative projections
- Expected expenses, mortgage included: ~$30,000/year
- Net cash flow: ~$25,000/year after all costs

- Loan amount: $20,000
- Term: 18 months
- Rate: 10% annual
- Repayment: monthly interest ($167/month) or quarterly ($500/quarter), plus lump-sum principal at refinance
- Total interest earned: $3,000 over 18 months
- Security: second deed of trust on a $250,000 property
- Exit: repayment from cash flow, or a refinance at month 12–18 once the property is seasoned (lender-speak for having months of real income history on the books)

Page 6: Risk Mitigation

Show how you protect their money:

- Insurance: full hazard coverage plus liability
- Reserves: six months of operating costs, with the actual number shown
- Personal guarantee: you're personally liable
- Track record: past properties, cash flow, and exits, if you have them
- Preparation: your market research and operating plan

Page 7: Exit Strategy

Show them how they get paid back:

- Months 0–3: property launches and generates revenue
- Month 6: cash flow covering the interest payments with room to spare
- Months 12–18: repay the $20,000 principal, from cash flow alone (at ~$25K/year net, the property earns it inside a year) or from a refinance if the appraisal supports one
- Either way, the lender is paid in full by month 18
- You keep the property and the cash flow

The Key Message

> "You're not betting on me. You're betting on the property's cash flow and the equity I'm building. Worst case, the property still has value and you have a lien against it."

The Ask, Word for Word

For a warm contact, keep it simple and honest:

> "I've been buying cash-flowing short-term rentals and I have a new deal projected to bring in 30–40% returns. Would you be open to lending $20K at 12% annual interest? It's secured by real property and paid monthly or quarterly, much better than letting it sit in savings."

Always get it in writing: a promissory note plus terms; for larger loans, record a lien or deed of trust, and many lenders are also added to the property's insurance policy, the same protection a bank would demand. This path runs on existing relationships and total honesty: tell them exactly what the money is for, plan to pay them back from day one, and pay them back.
