

Your $355K dream-market Airbnb and a $170K cabin in a town nobody brags about can make the same money. One of them lets you sleep at night.

Dr. Jeff Chheuy was a burned-out pharmacist when he bought his first short-term rental. It worked, and he would never do that deal again. The deals that built his portfolio were in small towns near national parks: a $170K cabin that grossed $72K in its first year. A $103K fixer that brought in $150K over two. His business partner's $170K home that did $83,937 in year one, on $15K down.

This book is the complete playbook: the 5-step RURAL Method for buying short-term rentals that cash flow from day one, in towns you've never visited, run from your phone in about three hours a week per property.

- R — find markets with a million-plus visitors and almost nowhere to stay
- U — buy with 5-15% down, so the payment protects you
- R — why income follows sleeping capacity
- A — design and photos that win the 3-second scroll
- L — the systems that handle a literal fire while you're 2,000 miles away

No hype. A real profit-and-loss statement printed inside. Every number is real, and the author tells you exactly when to walk away.
